

ABSTRACT

A multi-line power transmission system includes a first power transmission line having a first impedance characteristic, a second power transmission line, in parallel with the first power transmission line, and having a second impedance characteristic less than the first impedance characteristic, and a power flow controller, coupled to the second power transmission line, for controlling at least one of the magnitude and direction of the power flowing through the second power transmission line.

5
20721458.doc